Excerpt: . . . 301. JOSIMO ROSELLI, (born 1439, still living in 1506). Our Sav1our After H1s Resurrect1on, standing in front of the Sepulchre; His right hand is raised in the act of benediction; in His left he holds a banner, charged with a red cross on a white ground. In the background of the picture are small figures of the Madonna and Child, and St. John. This picture may be taken as a tydal example of the Florentine school of religious painting of the 15th century; the subject itself is an imaginative or symbolical one--the severe abstract style of design, the brilliant, yet unreal colouring, the symmetrical manner in which the details of the picture are arranged, are all characteristics which, seen in hundreds of pictures of the school and period, must be accepted with due allowance as genuine evidences of the mode of thought and feeling...
