Excerpt: . . . ILL-USED MEN. T AMENTING the fact that I had not the privilege of arranging the Lectures of this Institute myself, I will express a hope, at the outset of my discourse, that you will sympathise with me in the difficult task of reconciling the public mind, after it has been for two successive weeks devoted to the gorilla, to the consideration of mere men and women--ill-used men. I have some boldness in asking of you this boon, because I doubt not that most among you consider yourselves as ill-used men, but at the same time I candidly state my belief that however many of you may have been badly treated, the greater number, if you put it honestly to your consciences, will find that you have received far more good than you have ever deserved, and have been treated much better than you could ever have expected. I deny not that here and there one may have received an injury; but, if you carefully balance up the book of life, you will find that you have done the same thing to others, and have no right to complain. In answering the inquiry, who are ill-used men I exclude martyrs and confessors entirely, because theirs is a kind of suffering above ill-usage altogether, and, to instance what I mean by the term, I will state my opinion that Socrates, while a martyr when drinking the hemlock draught, was an ill-used man in his relations to...
