H., April 16, 1865: In the First Congregational Church, on the Occasion of the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln Touch no pleasant meat, neither drink any rejoicing drink. Ye children, begotten of a long and cruel bondage, just born to freedoms manhood, gather ye close around your Heavenly Father, and breathe out your woes into his compassionate ear. Freeman and bondmen mourn and weep. Oh, God, thou givest us tears to drink in great measure - How marvelous are thy judgments, and thy ways past finding out. I scarcely feel like speaking, or you like hearing to-day. The sobs of the spirit stifle the living voice. The tears of the soul are hot within the heart, and the fountain of feeling is choked up with our heavy sorrow. Men turn pale in the street; women cry out in anguish in our homes; children weep as for a dying father. As the mournful tidings fly tremblingly through the Land, the nation s heart, stunned, palsied by the blow, almost ceases to...
