Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: .come, the majority of the people of the United States will get their living from the soil. Getting a living from the soil is now a scientific and profitable pursuit for those who know best how to do it--those who take advantage of all the new knowledge. As the number of such persons increases and better and better methods are used, and especially as better and better management is used, the profits and the joys of country life will grow. Organization will take the place of wasteful individual work. The intellectual life will be cultivated. The time dreamed of by poets and philosophers will come--may come--throughout the great fertile stretches of our country; and it would come within a remarkably short time if all the forces now at work for it could be coordinated and directed right. A great common movement toward such an end would...
