Deepstorm Outtack

By George S. Boughton

George S Boughton. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 358 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.2in. x 0.8in. This truly scientific action adventure is - space travel to space cities; the environment, climate change, earthquakes and oil pollution; as well as the reality of dinosaur extinctions

Synopsis: You are living in the 2060s. Change is inescapable. The people around you are nothing like those you know today. The world population has increased from seven to nine billion and everyone has a highly developed lifestyle, whereas 50 years earlier only one billion could enjoy such a level. In the science novel DeepStorm OutTack, devastating consequences are averted through UNESCO's tough stance on conservation, notably deforestation and oil pollution, and urbanites must now accept beehive dwellings and birth licensing. Nature is not the same either. The ageing Earth pushes up barometric pressures and the expanding Sun forces up temperatures. Now, quickening continental movements shake and sweep cities to ruin. A new age is beginning. . . Under world governments initiatives, populations now migrate to man-made Near Earth Territories, amid outbreaks of war. Civilisation is taking its place in the cosmos. This tale is told by young cosmologists and earth scientists enlisted from ordinary Earth backgrounds...
