On reading your sanctities letter I thought of Elijah the Tishbite prophet, who when persecuted by impiety betook himself to the hill of Horeb, and as a reward for his tribulation gained the privilege of seeing and conversing with God, so far as is possible for men. When He that knows all things before they are as it is written1 approached him like a father, and assumed the appearance of ignorance in order to comfort him, like a father who comforts his beloved son by playing with him, and in order to lighten the weariness and distress that he had incurred from the long journey, and said to him, What doest thou here, Elijah?, he stirred up the zeal that was blazing in him and answered very hotly (and...
